Art Unit: 2111

1. Claims 1- 6 remain for examination and claims 8-13 remain withdrawn.
2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Allen et al, U.S. Patent No. 5,732,207, cited in the previous office action.

Allen et al teaches the invention as claimed in claim 1 including a re-configurable processor integrated circuit (200) comprising:

(a) a processing core for operating on a set of instructions to carry out a predefined process (201, 290),

(b) a plurality of input/output (i/o) pins (col. 4, line 48),

(c) a re-configurable interface (212) for interfacing between said processor core and said i/o pins, said re-configurable interface operable to define how each of said plurality of i/o pins interfaces with (col. 4, lines 59-67) said processor core and functionality associated therewith (214, 217; col. 5, line 32) in accordance with configuration information stored in non-volatile memory and can be altered (220, col. 5, line 15; col. 3, line 27), and further teaches as in claims 2-6,

Art Unit: 2111

(d) wherein said i/o pins are configured in functional groups (pin group A or B; col. 5, line 19) – claim 2,

(e) wherein each of said plurality of i/o pins can be interfaced to any one of a plurality of i/o of said processor core by said re-configurable interface (420; col. 5, line 18) – claim 3,

(f) wherein said re-configurable interface is programmable by a user (col. 4, line 59) – claim 4,

(g) wherein said processor core comprises a digital section interfacing with an analog section coupled to analog i/o pins (col. 7, line 44; analog pins for analog input signal) – claim 5, and

(h) wherein said analog pins are not re-configurable with said re-configurable interface (implementing configurable option is a design choice) – claim 6.

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 2111

5. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cheung et al, U.S. Patent No. 6,262,594 in view of Allen et al, U.S. Patent No. 5,732,207, both cited in the previous office action.

Cheung et al teaches the invention substantially as claimed as set forth in the previous office action incorporated herein by reference, however, does not expressly teach that the configuration storing memory is non-volatile.

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made that using a non-volatile memory over volatile memory is a desirable option that allows more durable (with power off) storage of data.

The person would have been motivated to incorporate a non-volatile memory to have any type of data without volatility including the configuration data pre-installed and preserved during power-off, as taught in Allen et al (col. 3, line 30).

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-6 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

7. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
